

ATTEMPT TO BREAK YOUTHFUL NARCOTIC "RING" IS UNDERWAY

Henry Harding Fined $50
for Carrying Marihuana
Cigarettes

WARN PARENTS

Activity of Officers Result in Arrest

The first step in a strenuous effort to break up once and for all the nefarious practice of smoking marihuana, a poisonous Mexican weed, was taken here Tuesday evening when Henry Harding, 24, well known N. Court-st youth, was seized and lodged in the county jail charged with possession of the "weed."

Harding pleaded guilty before Squire E. C. Fricke, Wednesday morning, and was fined $50 and costs and committed to the county jail until paid. This amount is the minimum with $500 and costs the maximum.

The youth was placed under arrest by Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputy Sheriff Bob Armstrong at Bell's siding about 7:15 p. m. Tuesday. The officers had learned Harding had been in Columbus and was on his way home. He had been under suspicion for some time in connection with distributing the "cigarettes" and acting on a hunch the officers stopped an automobile in which he was riding.

DROPPED "DRUG"
Harding dropped six of the "cigarettes" on the ground but officers picked them up and confiscated them. He had another in his pocket.

A search was made of the automobile in which the youth was riding with another man but when nothing incriminating could be found Harding's companion, whose name was not disclosed, was not arrested.

After being brought to the county jail Harding admitted buying the "cigarettes" in Columbus and said he had paid 25 cents for three. Officers learned the usual price is two for 25 cents. He said he had brought them here at various times but had never sold them, only giving them away.

Members of the sheriff's office have been working on "tips" that a youthful "narcotic ring" has been operating here for the past year. They have names in their possession of young men and young women who have become more or less addicted to the use of the product but have never been able to find anyone with the "cigarettes" in their possession.

WARNED PARENTS

They have told various parents of the activities of their sons and daughters but have been scoffed at with the reply "That is impossible, I know my boy or girl does not hide in such a practice." The officers have gone on nevertheless and now believe they are on the way to put a conclusive end to the chapter which might have spread into dangerous channels.

Young Harding was given the minimum sentence by Squire Fricke upon advice of Sheriff Radcliff and Prosecutor Ray W. Davis. Both officers believe since the initial arrest has been made an end may be put to the practice. According to Sheriff Radcliff it might have been one of several local youths arrested instead of Harding. Lines have been out for quite a while but the N. Court-st youth happened to be the one caught.

"If a second person is arrested," Sheriff Radcliff declared for publication Wednesday, "he or she, whichever it may be, can count upon being fined the maximum. We intend to break up the practice of smoking these poisonous 'cigarettes' if we have to devote our entire time to it."

"I want to warn parents," he declared, "to learn what their sons and daughters have been doing. We warned several of what was going on but they would not believe us. I hope that this arrest will open their eyes."

PLANS FOR STATE'S FOREST ARMY BEGIN

'Marihuana -- Its Ferocity' Told In Magazine Article

Drug Long Has Been Used In Mexican Vice; One Cigarette Provides 'Three Hour Jag' and Excessive Use Brings Criminal Delirium; Customs Authorities Are Handcuffed.

An explanation of marihuana and its strength was made in an article in the magazine section of the New York Mirror, Dec. 11, 1932.

The article reads: "Out of the great open spaces of the west comes a new vice that puts in jeopardy much of the progress that has been made against the war on drugs and drug addiction."

"The customs authorities have made much progress in shutting out morphine, heroin, opium and cocaine from abroad, but they can't stop loco-weed. It doesn't come from abroad. It's an American product. In Mexico, and now in New York, they call it marihuana."

DRIVES USERS MAD

"The great open spaces are full of it. Horses and cattle eat it and it drives them mad. Today it is being smoked in Harlem, Greenwich village, and wherever crazy kids gather and the smoke has the same effect on human beings that the green weed has on horses and cattle. It drives them mad.

"When a horse has been eating loco-weed, you can tell it, first because he gets slow-gaited and logy, and won't drink. Then his eyes become staring and queer and he starts making weird, uncanny motions with his head and body, and his whole appearance becomes abnormal to a startling degree. You can give him medicine but it doesn't do him any good. He wants more loco-weed. Finally he has to be shot."

"No other drug, not even cocaine itself, has such ghastly effect upon the human brain. As an inciter to atrocious crimes it is in a class with heroin and cocaine."

SPREADS IN COUNTRY

Announcement that the county commissioners had declined to approve a bill for $100 to be paid Emmet L. Crist, former prosecuting attorney, for assisting the state in the Newell McNeal case before the court of appeals, was erroneous inasmuch as Mr. Crist was not appointed by Judge Joseph W. Adkins nor was the fee set by the local judge. Appointment was made by the court of appeals judges who also set the fee the assistant counsel should receive for his work.

Preparation for presenting briefs for the case before the court of appeals required much time, the court's judges pointed out.

CINCINNATI, April 12.—Robert Zwick, so-called "phantom fox" of the southern Ohio underworld, today was sentenced to life imprisonment in Ohio penitentiary without hope of pardon for the murder here in 1928 of Robert Andres, a railway clerk.

The sentence was handed down by Judge Frederick Hoffman. Zwick was convicted on the charge of murder by a jury last week. The jury recommended mercy.

Resigned to his fate, Zwick accepted the sentence calmly and without emotion. While Zwick himself declined to comment, his attorney, John W. Driskill said he was satisfied that the convicted man had received "fair consideration."

YOUTH'S ALIBI HALTS POLICE

Haggard, Suspect. Supported by Mother and Orchestra Members

"FRIEND OF WOMAN"
Youth Was Life Guard at Shawnee Hills

COLUMBUS, April 12.—Unshaken after two hours of grilling last night, Mordaunt Coons Jr., an architectural engineer and a graduate of Ohio State University, was expected to be placed under further questioning by police here today in connection with the mysterious and unsolved murder of Mrs. Haggard, 25-year-old Columbus mother.

Coons was taken into custody yesterday for investigation by police, who declined to divulge what evidence, if any, they had linking him with the baffling crime.

SEEN BY COP?

It was reported, however, that Coons had been tentatively identified by Patrolman Anson Conner as a man who boarded a west Broad street car on the night the murder was committed.

During the two-hour grilling last night, Coons asserted that on the night of the crime he was playing in a dance orchestra in a restaurant near Ohio State University. Four members of the orchestra verified Coons' story.

Although admitting that he was acquainted with Mrs. Haggard, Coons denied that he had ever held trusts with her. He said that he first came to know Mrs. Haggard at Shawnee Hills where the Haggards had a summer cottage. Coons worked as a life guard at the resort.

Long Indictments Read as Trial Begins

MOSCOW, April 12.—One British and all eleven Russian defendants in the Metropolitan-Vickers, Ltd., sabotage case pleaded guilty today a few hours after their trial opened before a tense crowd of spectators in Moscow's famed "October Hall."

The British prisoner who admitted his guilt was W. H. MacDonald. The other five British defendants entered pleas of not guilty.

The pleas were entered immediately after lengthy indictments returned against the prisoners were read. The indictments revealed a staggering array of charges against the defendants, including espionage, sabotage, corruption and counter-revolutionary activity.

The five British defendants who stoutly maintained their innocence in the face of the grave charges were Allan Monkhouse, Charles Nordwell, W. H. Thornton, John Cusby and A. W. Gregory.

WITH BRITISH FIRM

All, as well as the eleven Russians, are employed by Metropolitan-Vickers, Ltd., a powerful British electrical engineering and manufacturing concern engaged in business in Soviet Russia.

After the pleas were recorded, the court recessed until 6 p. m.

Before the trial got under way at noon with a crowd of more than 500 persons, including the diplomatic corps and representatives of the world press, in attendance, the indictments against the accused men were kept secret. Their reading, however, disclosed the following allegations: First, that the defendants damaged Soviet plants with the aim of undermining the power of Soviet industry and weakening the Soviet state.

Second, that they collected and utilized secret information of military and state importance.

Third, that they resorted to bribery to corrupt various employees.

According to plans, the Macon will take off at dawn tomorrow morning.

Ground conditions at the dock here were rather unfavorable today due to the heavy rains of the last few days. It was believed that the soggy condition would dry-up considerably today however, under the warm rays of a bright sun.

Lawyer—Soldier—Judge—Mayor Governor General Before Forty

The Career of Frank Murphy, Detroit's Youthful Mayor, Appointed to Govern Philippine Islands is Something of a Record.

Not yet forty at the time of his appointment, Mayor Frank Murphy of Detroit, who has been named by President Roosevelt as Governor General of the Philippines is an ideal example of the bromide "youth will be served." A native of Harbor Beach, Mich., Murphy was graduated from the University of Michigan Law School in 1914, after which he studied in Lincoln's Inn, London, and at Trinity College, Dublin. With the entrance of the United States into the World War, he attended the first officers' training camp and was commissioned a first lieutenant. He served overseas, was promoted to captain and remained in Germany during 1919 with the army of Occupation. In 1920, Murphy returned home to civilian life and made his political debut as Chief Assistant United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Michigan. In 1923, at the age of thirty, he became Judge of the Recorder's Court of Detroit. In this capacity he became widely known for his liberal tendencies on the bench. His popularity grew by leaps and bounds, and in 1930 he was elected Mayor of Detroit. During his administration as Chief Magistrate of the automobile city, Mayor Murphy attracted nationwide attention by his championship of the unemployed, and the relief programs he inaugurated for their benefit. In the recent Presidential campaign, while Michigan's Democratic leaders were still sticking to the bandwagon of Alfred E. Smith, Murphy came out for Roosevelt and played a prominent part in the latter's victory in the State.

'CULT' LEADER CONVICTED BY JURORS TODAY

One of Strangest Cases in History Nears Close; Others Freed

LIFE TERM IS FACED

Two Brothers Get Terms of 21 Years

INEZ, Ky., April 12.—John H. Mills, 33, leader of a mountain religious cult known as "the tongue," today was found guilty by a jury in circuit court here of the murder of his 67-year-old mother, Mrs. Lucinda Mills.

He was immediately sentenced to serve life imprisonment in the state penitentiary.

Ballard Mills, 18-year-old brother of John, and Elaine McGinnis, a brother-in-law, also were found guilty. They were given sentences of 21 years imprisonment each.

OTHERS FREED

The remainder of the defendants were found not guilty.

The verdict of the jury was returned at 10:30 o'clock this morning after 12 hours of deliberation.

Mrs. Mills was slain at the height of a fanatical ceremony conducted by "the tongue cult" in a mountain cabin near here last February. She was made the "sacrifice victim" of the cult. The slaying resulted when the aged woman was bound in chains and placed on an "alter-bed" where she was choked to death while members of the cult, jabbering in the unintelligible language of "the tongue," danced about.

The jury, considering the case, one of the strangest in the history of the Kentucky mountains, emerged from its deliberations at nine o'clock this morning and reported it was unable to reach a verdict. After asking for further instructions, the jury retired to its chamber and again took up its deliberations.

OUT SHORT TIME

The jury was out only a short time after receiving its new and amplified instructions. Emerging a second time, the foreman announced that a verdict had been reached and the defendants were brought into the court from the jail where they were being held.

Before the verdict was read, the attorneys for both the prosecution and the defense were congratulated by the court upon their broadmindedness in handling the case.

Then the court proceeded to read the verdict.

We, the jury, find John H. Mills guilty of murder and sentence him to a life term in the state penitentiary. We also find Ballard Mills and Elaine McGinnis guilty and sentence them to 21 years each in the state penitentiary."

The four other defendants who were acquitted were: Mollie McGinnis, wife of Elaine; Fred Mills, Ora Moore and Thomas Body.

None of the defendants displayed any emotion when the verdict and sentences were read. Neither of the convicted brothers would make a statement. Elaine McGinnis, however, asserted: "I'm going to appeal the case."

Conservatives of Ohio banks, meanwhile, were under orders from the banking department to determine whether criminal negligence or misbehavior caused bank closings in Ohio.

A Community Need

WHY should not Circleville stage a campaign similar to those being conducted in many other American cities to spur property owners to the making of repairs and improvements?

In some cities organized campaigns with this as their objective are under way. Reports indicate that they are making encouraging progress. The idea is to emphasize, for the benefit of property owners, the advantage it will be to their own interests to make whatever repairs or improvements their property may be in need of. While prices of materials and labor are low.

There is, of course, another purpose to such a campaign. Unemployment is a serious problem in this area. A campaign and business is stimulated. This represents a part of the community value of such undertakings. But there are other advantages. Among these, as the Ohio State Journal points out in commenting on the Columbus campaign, is "the development of social and spiritual values that will live and continue productive long after temporary improvements have served their day and passed away."

There could be no better time, from the individual or the community standpoint, than the present for owners to undertake the rehabilitation of their properties. Eventually repairs will have to be made whether or not the time is propitious. Financially. The cost then may be far in excess of what it would be at present.

Circleville property owners well might bear this point in mind. Most of them are shrewd business men and women. Most of them also take pride in their town and have at heart the welfare of the less fortunate members of the community. By having needed work done now they can save money for themselves, improve the appearance of the community and help persons deserving help.

You don't have to collect bills; they just accumulate.

A Step Much Needed

FROM Florida recently has come a little news item that may have large results in its eventual bearing upon national legislation.

It reported that Colonel Henry Lindley, the American Legion's first national commander, had drawn up resolutions calling for a reversal of the legion's stand on payment of the cash bonus, asking the organization to pledge its support to the president in his economic program.

Colonel Lindley is requesting revision of the pension policy with emphasis on the disabled, dependents of the war dead and the injured and placing a curb on the legion's lobby in Washington. Colonel Lindley plans to present the resolutions to the October convention of the veterans in Chicago.

Adoption of a program such as he proposes would have appeared a few months ago as being impossible. The legion since then, however, has under gone a marked softening of attitude with respect to governmental benefits for its members. Signs of conservatism have begun to appear within its councils. These tend to give an encouraging aspect to its prospective policies.

The legion's former course in relation to the bonus and other similar questions had the effect of causing serious division within the ranks of its membership and of placing the organization in an unfavorable light with the public. The membership is reported to have become much weakened as the result of resignations, which may account in part for the changed attitude on the part of the legion.

The Lindley program if adopted might serve to restore public confidence in the legion and repair some of the damage caused by its former demands upon the government. It would also tend to bring the legion into line with the patriotic element within the legion to do this. The result will be watched with much interest. The legion has an important duty in assisting in looking after the welfare of its disabled members. To mix politics with this duty, though, and try to dictate to the government in making unwise and unjustifiable demands is not a proper function. The movement to set it upon the proper path is an encouraging development.

THE CHALLENGE OF LOVE
by WARWICK DEEPIING

SYNOPSIS

Sam Perkins, Dr. Montague Threadgold's bottle boy, meets his employer's latest assistant, Dr. John Wolfe on the latter's arrival at Little Navestock in a wet winter dusk. Sam notices mentally that the new doctor's luggage is very light as he conducts the stranger to the Threadgold house, where he meets Dr. Threadgold—chubby, sleek, and "the most affable of men." Conducted to his top-story room, Wolfe swiftly recalls his seven years of work and study—how he earned his way by boxing exhibitions as a country fair "bruiser," as a tavern singer, and as a railroad laborer. And now, after all, Wolfe is almost penniless. As he descends the stairs he hears a high-pitched female voice....

CHAPTER THREE

The drawing-room of Prospect House reminded Wolfe of the conventional idea of heaven, in that it was full of much gold and of things that glittered. The pictures were all in gold frames, and the mirrors vied with the pictures. Lustrous glittered on the great central chandelier and on the candlesticks upon the marble mantelpiece. The clock was a monstrous creation in gold. The turkey-red curtains were edged with gold braid and looped back with gold tasselled cords. Purplish red tapestry covered the sofa, ottoman, and chairs, the upholstery being finished off with red gimp and brass-headed nails. On the wall paper yellow roses rambled through festoons of orange ribbons. The antimacassars were in red and yellow wool, and the carpet was not unlike a glorified antimacassar.

Beside the fire sat a very regal little person in a huge crinoline, black bodice, and lace cap. Her round, pudgy, exquisitely comely face looked out from between clay-colored ringlets and from under the lace ribbons, and jet ornaments of the aforesaid cap. Her nose was a little beak, and her blue eyes protruded slightly and always retained the same hard, staring expression. Her mouth drooped at the corners over a dumpy and formless chin. As for her dress—it was of black silk, and rustled whenever she moved.

Dr. Threadgold jumped up from mending the fire.

"Haw—Mr. Wolfe. My dear, permit me to introduce Mr. Wolfe to you. Mr. John Wolfe—my wife, Mrs. Threadgold."

Wolfe's bow did not equal the sententious dignity of the doctor's introduction. Mrs. Threadgold gave the new assistant a very slight inclination of the head and went on with her knitting. She felt it to be part of her business in life to counteract the effects of her husband's intense affability.

"Draw up a chair, sir, and get warm. That's right. Never mind the hearthrug."

"My dear Montague, I—must put in a word for the hearthrug, especially when the edge is all crumpled up."

Wolfe thrust the arm-chair a yard further back. He caught Mrs. Threadgold's eyes fixed upon the extreme length of his outstretched legs, and upon the muddy pair of boots that he had forgotten to change. A nervous man would have drawn up his legs and tucked his feet under the chair. Wolfe did not move.

"Well, sir, and how do you like Navestock? Threadgold's spectacles beamed—"Not much opportunity to judge yet, eh? We are quiet, humdrum people, but I think you will find us quite alive after our fashion. In politics, though, I am a bit of a Liberal."

"Montague, you know that you are nothing of the kind."

"My dear—"

"Dr. Threadgold must have his facetiousities, Mr. Wolfe. The most eminent men are sometimes the most playful. I may inform you that Navestock is one of the most loyal and Conservative towns in the kingdom; as it should be, and as it will always be so long as Lord Blackwater is Lord of the Manor, the Brandons hold 'Parlours,' and the old families remain. I must say that the neighbourhood is a most aristocratic one, and that the gentry—"

A gong sounded downstairs. Mrs. Threadgold ignored it.

"That the gentry realize their responsibilities to the poor, without needing any impertinent, vulgar clamour on the part of low Radicals."

Dr. Threadgold pulled out his watch.

"It is exactly one minute before the half hour, Montague."

"So it is, my dear."

"I think it right that a young man in Mr. Wolfe's position should receive some instruction as to the character of the neighbourhood in which Dr. Threadgold is the leading physician and surgeon. I need not say that in a practice such as this—"

The gong sounded a second time.

"Good manners—and tact—are of great importance. Was that the gong, Montague?"

"My dear, it was."

"Then we will go down to supper."

Mrs. Threadgold possessed the power of making nervous people lose their appetite and refuse with a fluster of self-consciousness the second helping that they so much desired. John Wolfe was as hungry as a man could be, and not being troubled with shyness, he listened gravely to Mrs. Threadgold's titillating and kept on good terms with the round of roast beef at the end of the table. Threadgold helped him generously, for his good humour was not a surface virtue, and the doctor and his dining-room harmonized admirably. Everything was solid, comfortable, and opulent. Old portraits, in oils hung upon the brown-papered walls. The sideboard was a fine piece of Sheraton, the chairs Hepplewhite, and upholstered with red brocade. The Turkey carpet claimed part of the prosperity of the practice.

Mrs. Threadgold had an eye on Wolfe's plate. She had been studying the new man, noticing the faded edges of his tie and the shiny buttons of his coat. Her observation dealt mainly with external details. She did not go below the surface, for to Mrs. Sophia Threadgold life was all surface, a matter of gilding, glass, fresh paint, pew cushions, silk, pasteboard, and fine linen. Wolfe impressed her as a raw hawk of a man who was inclined to be silent and sulky. He had come into her drawing-room with dirty boots, and eaten three helpings of cold beef, and these details were full of significance.

It was an understandable impulse that drove her to talk about Sir Joshua Kermody, the senior physician at Guy's, a gentleman, with a fashionable consulting practice and a decision in the dieting of dukes and yet more distinguished persons.

"Sir Joshua has often stayed a night with us here at Navestock. He and Dr. Threadgold were students together and great friends."

"O yes—I knew Kermody pretty well."

"One of the most perfect gentlemen I have ever met. I suppose you have often listened to Sir Joshua's lectures, Mr. Wolfe?"

"Yes, for one whole year."

"And you have followed him round the wards, too?"

"Miles."

Mrs. Threadgold's face showed some transient animation.

"What an opportunity for you young men. Quite an education—in manners. I have often heard that medical students are such vulgar young fellows. Sir Joshua is just the one to provide them with a little polish. The hospital should be very proud of Sir Joshua."

Muscular Aches Are Confusing

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

MOST PERSONS have heard a lot about rheumatism. Either they have suffered from the disease or know of others who are chronic sufferers. Although tremendous strides have been made in the treatment of rheumatism, the disease still continues to be a great menace to health. It is a menace because of the serious complications that result from the ailment.

Dr. Copeland

The word "rheumatism" is greatly abused, is misunderstood and misapplied. It is commonly used to describe symptoms which are really caused by neuritis, arthritis, neuralgia, and other afflictions of muscles and joints. It is a disease which afflicts children as well as adults. In children it is often confused with so-called "growing pains."

Rheumatic Fever

In one form the disease is known as "acute rheumatic fever." The sufferer has a high fever, sweats freely and complains of severe pain in the joints. This may be so severe that the slightest vibration or movement produces excruciating suffering.

Victims of this disease should remain in bed until all symptoms and fever disappear. The inflamed joints should be fixed in a comfortable position. This can be done with pillows or by wrapping the joint firmly in layers of cotton batting, or by a well-fitted, padded splint of wood, or light plaster.

The diet should be simple and contain sufficient calories to prevent any loss of weight. Fluids should be taken freely to replace the fluid lost by excessive sweating.

Internal medicine for the relief of pain and fever must be prescribed by the physician. The pain should be controlled so that the sufferer may obtain rest. Restful sleep lessens the pain and gives the sufferer strength to overcome his siege of illness.

Children afflicted with this disease should remain in bed for a period of two or three months after the acute signs have disappeared. Involvement of the heart is a common complication of acute rheumatic fever in children. Complete rest in bed minimizes this danger. Though it is difficult to keep a child in bed for this length of time, I strongly recommend that this plan be followed if possible.

Remove Center of Infection

Every effort should be made to remove all centers of infection. Infected tonsils, infected teeth, sinuses and other foci of infection within the body, tend to prolong or to bring about a recurrence of this disease. Diseased tonsils and teeth should never be removed during the acute attack. It is best to wait until the acute symptoms of the disease have subsided.

Avoid damp places and exposure to cold and wet. The sufferer from rheumatism benefits by plenty of fresh air, sunshine and good food. Rheumatic fever is almost unknown in tropical and sub-tropical climates. Of course, southern weather is ideal for the victims of this disease.

Recently experimental work has been conducted with vaccines. These are made from bacteria taken from the throats of patients with acute rheumatic fever and those convalescing from the disease. The vaccine is injected into the tissues of the sufferer. The results have been gratifying in a few cases. It is hoped that the vaccine will be perfected and a reliable cure discovered for this painful and dreaded affliction.

Boy Scout News

TROOP 158

A large number of new boys attended the meeting Monday night. The troop is advancing rapidly and Scoutmaster Betts has ordered that all boys wanting to join must have their registration sheets and fees in by April 24.

After the roll call Monday Assistant Scoutmaster Betz led in a marching drill. This is a very essential thing for the appearance of the troop. It is going to be a regular part of every troop meeting. Further instruction concerning the scout circus was given by Scoutmaster Betts. A short talk concerning his experiences and telling about his support of scouting was given by the chairman of the troop committee, Reed Shafer.

Much enjoyment was gained from two pairs of boxing gloves purchased by the legion. Almost everyone had a chance to use the gloves during the bouts.

A full representation is expected at the scout circus and most of the boys promise to have their uniforms.

The Housewife's Question Box

Question:—How are dandelion greens prepared?

Answer:—It is time to be thinking of dandelion greens for they are best when very young and tender. They may be served raw as a salad or cooked in the ways recommended for greens.

Wilted dandelion is a favorite. Wash and pick over very carefully. Make a dressing of the following:

- 3 or 4 strips of bacon cut in dice and cooked crisp.
- 1-2 cup vinegar.
- 1-2 cup water.
- 2 tablespoons sugar.
- A few grains of salt.

Combine these ingredients and heat to the boiling point.

Cut up the dandelion greens and pour this hot dressing over them.

Many like some finely cut onion mixed with the dandelion; others prefer adding some slices of hard cooked egg.

ator Black (D) of Alabama after a visit to the White House that the bill will become law, was accepted as a general approval of the principle of the short-week legislation by the president himself.

GIVE WIDE POWERS

Proposals to make Miss Perkins a virtual czar of American industry by giving her wide powers to exempt classes and individual industries from operation of the legislation, were to be placed before her.

While she declined to reveal the changes she will suggest, "to make the bill more workable," leaders on the House labor committee indicated they would fight to give her the power to make exemptions.

Modification of the measure to provide for a 7-hour day, 5-day week was to be urged by Rep. Keller (D) of Illinois.

A broad program to create more jobs also was being suggested in administration circles as a part of the five-day week legislation.

This included a new campaign for ratification of the child labor amendment to remove children from industry, an old age pension bill to remove elderly employees, appropriation of money to send Filipinos and other unemployed aliens to their homes, and to restrict the employment of women in industry.

PASSAGE SEEN

Passage of the five-day week bill in the house, if approved by President Roosevelt, was accepted as a certainty. The measure was passed by the senate, but is being held in that body.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST PATTERN BARGAIN

Mrs. Thurn's Weekly Letter Answering Recipe Requests

Dear Friends in Circleville:

To the bride who asked for a recipe for soda biscuits: my first reply is "Get a good cook book." I'm glad to print any recipe here. If the soda biscuit is such a simple variation of the baking powder biscuit recipe that I grudge the space to print it; but here it is. In your best baking powder biscuit recipe, use sour milk or buttermilk for the liquid, and instead of all baking powder use one-half teaspoon of soda. Add one-half teaspoon of baking powder. Mix according to your directions, and bake as for any biscuit.

Russian Beet Soup

This recipe comes from a famous Russian cookbook and is the authentic procedure for the genuine sour beet soup. Grind three cups cooked beetroot through the finest knives of the meat chopper, to extract the juice; one cup "sourvets" (explained below); two pounds of beef; one roasting or boiling chicken; one pound ribs of mutton; four large cooked beet-tablespoon flour; one egg yolk; celery; one small head cabbage; four large potatoes; two tomatoes; one fourth pound salt pork; one saup bowl, "sourvets" mean one onion; one-half cup sour cream.

The delicious sour flavor comes mostly from the sourvets, which the Russian housewife makes in large quantities and keeps on hand, usually in a wooden keg in the cellar. For our American kitchens and the simplified version of Borscht make a small quantity as follows: One pound and a half of dry buckwheat flour bread, broken, with one pint boiling water poured over it; when the water has cooled add one pint cold water and one fourth yeast cake previously softened in one fourth cup lukewarm water. Keep the bowl in the kitchen or any warm place until fermentation begins. When fermented (and sour) use. After fermentation begins, keep in a cool place, adding cold water for any removed; it will keep for several months.

From the list of ingredients above, mix the three cups beetroot juice and one cup sourvets with one cup water, add one fourth yeast cake, salt, put in the same saucepan the beef and chicken and cover cooking slowly until the chicken is tender. Remove the scum and the chicken. Leaving the beef in the pan. Add one whole beetroot, and three chopped beetroots, the chopped carrots, celery and three sprigs of parsley. Continue cooking, and when the vegetables are almost tender, add the cabbage cut into six or eight pieces, the four potatoes peeled and cut into pieces. Continue cooking.

Cut the salt pork into small pieces, add the flour, onion and parsley leaves chopped fine, run through the finest knives of the meat grinder, then mash in the wooden chopping bowl until smooth. Put into the cooking soup stirring and mixing, and continue boiling. When the cabbage and potatoes are tender add the two fresh tomatoes cut into small pieces. Continue simmering.

When ready to serve, put into a large soup tureen one egg yolk and one half cup sour cream beaten a little together. Add the hot Borscht gradually, stirring constantly. Cut the fowl and meats quickly and add to the tureen. Serve from the tureen into soup plates, with a spoonful of sour cream on each. The Russians do not add the beef to the tureen, only the mutton and chicken, using the beef for "the servants' table." This of course in the day when there were rich Russians and servants' tables.

Italian Spaghetti

While we're discussing foreign cookery I shall give you a genuine Italian spaghetti recipe, for which a number of requests came in during the Cooking School.

If you grocer or an Italian food merchant in the community carries Tomato Paste, be sure to buy some for this recipe. If the Paste is not available, make a tomato sauce by this recipe: chop fine one quarter of an onion; a piece of celery; a small bunch of parsley; slice seven or eight tomatoes, fresh or canned, add salt, pepper and a little celery salt. Put all of these together in a saucepan with four tablespoons of good olive oil. Stir occasionally, and when it becomes as thick as cream strain.

Cook three-fourths of a pound of spaghetti in two quarts of salted water for fifteen minutes of lively boiling. Drain, rinse quickly under cold water, then dress with the following meat sauce in a hot frying pan, stirring a few minutes, then sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese, mix again and serve.

The meat sauce chop very fine a strip of ham fat, cut into a frying pan with a few slices of onion, one celery stalk chopped and some chopped parsley. Cook a few minutes until the fat is dark. Add two tablespoons of the above tomato sauce, boil together for fifteen minutes.

Italian cooks often use the tomato sauce alone, heating the spaghetti in it in the frying pan, and adding the Parmesan cheese to it. Others make both sauces, the meat and tomato, using the meat sauce with the small amount of tomato sauce or tomato paste to give color and flavor.

These sauces are delicious on rice, macaroni and noodles as well. If dry Parmesan cheese is not available, use any strong, dry cheese.

Butterscotch Rolls

Two yeast cakes; one cup milk; one fourth cup sugar; one fourth cup shortening; two eggs; one teaspoon salt; four and one half cups sifted flour. Scald the milk and when almost cool, add the yeast cakes and dissolve them in it; add the melted shortening, sugar, salt and eggs well beaten together. Then stir in the flour and mix well to a dough. Turn out on a lightly floured board and knead well.

Set to rise and when light, at least double in bulk, turn it down in its bowl; let rise again and work down again. Turn out again on lightly floured board. Shape in small rolls, lay on baking sheet rubbed with shortening. Let rise two hours or until very light. Bake in a hot oven till delicately brown. This is about fifteen minutes as a rule.

Ginger As a Good Flavor in Baking

There is such a wide interest in ginger bread, ginger cookies and spice cake flavored with ginger, that these excellent recipes have been assembled here. Buy a good quality of ground or powdered ginger, and keep tightly closed when not in use.

Soft Molasses Cookies

One cup New Orleans or baking molasses; one tablespoon ginger; one teaspoon soda; two tablespoons warm water or milk; one half cup butter; flour to mix to soft consistency, just stiff enough to roll lightly. Dissolve the soda in the milk, then mix the molasses and ginger together, adding the milk. Cream the butter and mix in the milk mixture, stirring to smoothness, gradually adding flour to a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board. Roll lightly to one-third inch thickness, and cut with any shaped cookie cutter. Chill and bake eight to fifteen minutes in a moderate oven on a cookie sheet or pan, lightly floured.

Ginger Dreams

Perhaps they are called "dreams" because they must rest overnight before baking. Perhaps because they melt deliciously at the first bite.

One cup brown sugar; one cup shortening; one cup baking molasses; one cup hot water; one teaspoon soda; one tablespoon ginger; one teaspoon cinnamon; one fourth teaspoon salt; one half teaspoon baking powder; flour to make a soft dough. Cream the shortening and sugar together; mix soda and hot water with molasses; sift baking powder with one cup flour, and salt, mix all together, beating until smooth, and add sufficient flour in addition to make a soft dough. Let stand overnight covered. Roll out in the morning, to one-fourth inch thickness, on a lightly floured board, and cut in small shapes. Bake in a moderate oven, five to eight minutes. Cover with any preferred icing.

Ginger Gems

One cup brown sugar; one cup shortening; two eggs; one cup molasses; one cup sour milk; four cups flour; one teaspoon ginger; one teaspoon soda. Cream sugar and shortening, blend with molasses into which the soda has been stirred (first soften the soda in a tablespoon of boiling water). Beat the eggs and mix with this, then add the ginger, mixing well. Add flour and sour milk alternately, beating thoroughly. Rub gems with shortening, fill each three quarters full, and bake in hot oven ten to fifteen minutes, or until delicately browned and done.

Steamed Ginger Pudding

One egg; one cup molasses; one half cup butter; one cup chopped dried figs; one cup hot water; one tablespoon ginger; one teaspoon soda; two and one-half cups flour. Beat the egg, add molasses, melted butter, and chopped figs, and beat well. Sift the ginger and soda with the flour and when well mixed combine with the hot water. Beat this smoothly, then put into a pan or mold rubbed with shortening, and steam for one hour. Serve with lemon sauce.

Baked Ginger Pudding

One quart of milk; one half cup yellow corn meal; one half cup molasses; one teaspoon salt; two teaspoons ginger; one tablespoon shortening. Beat one quart of the milk and add to the molasses, butter, salt and ginger, stirring well. Stir in the corn meal and cook for twenty minutes in the double boiler. Then add the beaten egg with half a cup of cream and a little more cold milk if the mixture is very thick. Pour into a casserole rubbed with shortening. Bake four hours in a slow oven, stirring often while baking. Serve with vanilla ice cream, or a chilled fruit sauce.

Summer Curtains Should be Cool

Four windows are in the group, part of which is shown above. The sheer, dotted voile curtains are cool, washable and inexpensive. The drapery treatment is described below.

Garden News

One important task for the early part of April is making new flower beds. The ground should usually be dug to a depth of at least two feet, any stones, gravel and sandy sub-soil turned out entirely and carried away, and all soil broken, turned and piled at one side to be returned to the excavation. In refilling the bed, the best garden authorities recommend that a layer of drainage material go in first. This should be coarse gravel, clinkers from the furnace, crushed stone, crushed brick or anything of that character.

On this put a layer of the sod cut away in digging the bed, turning the grass side down, or use a bed of straw from the stable, or leaves used as winter mulch around other garden beds. The next layer should be a mixture of the best soil dug from the bed, sod chopped into small pieces, and one-third to one-half as much rich fertilizer, with a good supply of coarse bone (known as inch bone at the seedsmen's) mixed in. Fill to within five or six inches of the bed's top. Pat down lightly with the spade, then put on the top layer of good garden loam, which has been sieved, and mixed with fertilizer and bone. This method is especially recommended for hardy plants, since the bed cannot be completely turned out and enriched each season as for annuals.

Fix Paths At This Time This part of April is also recommended as the best for trimming and refilling paths, correcting broken places in flagging, brick or wooden walks, trimming hedges, adding a new hedge, painting or making an addition to a garden house.

The soil should be spaded up around individual shrubs and trees at this time; in a neat circle, being careful not to cut the roots with the spade.

Weeds and wild grasses should be cut from the lawn at this time, cutting deep to remove wild roots. New tools for this cutting as well as all other forms of gardening are on display now in the hardware and seedsmen's shops.

Early Vegetables If the apple trees are in bloom in your district, or the temperature is not lower than fifty-five to sixty-five degrees, it is time to plant the first early vegetables. These include beans, corn, chickpeas, eggplants, peppers, tomatoes, melons, okra, squash, turnips and watermelon. All such plants as those to be transplanted later are re-planted as second sowings are put in the ground or sheltered boxes filled with earth at this time. These are beets, cabbage, cauliflower, carrots, lettuce, peas, radishes and turnips as well as many plants.

Red Birds Open Schedule Today

COLUMBUS, April 12.—A crowd of approximately 15,000 fans is expected to jam into the Red Bird Stadium this afternoon to witness the opening game of the American Association baseball season here between the Columbus and Minneapolis clubs.

HERE'S SCHEDULE

NEW YORK, April 12.—Here is the schedule for the opening major league games today:

- AMERICAN LEAGUE
Boston at New York.
Philadelphia at Washington.
Cleveland at Detroit.
Chicago at St. Louis.
- NATIONAL LEAGUE
New York at Boston.
Brooklyn at Philadelphia.
Pittsburgh at Cincinnati.
St. Louis at Chicago.

DEAN, WARNEKE TANGLE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, April 12.—Some 25,000 fans are expected at Wrigley field today when the Chicago Cubs and the St. Louis Cardinals open the fifty-eighth National league season here. Clear skies and warming temperatures were predicted for this afternoon.

One of the other of the two clubs have won the National league pennant every year since 1927.

Just a year ago Lon Warneke sat on the bench as just another pitcher, but the lack right handed leading National league hurler last year, will pitch the inaugural this afternoon for the Cubs. Gabby Hartnett will catch.

Warneke will oppose the loquacious Dizzy Dean unless the Cardinal master-minds decided at the last minute to pitch Paul Deringer.

Babe Herman, making his first Chicago appearance in a Cub uniform, is counted on to offset the batting department loss suffered by the incapacity of Kiki Cuyler.

SUSPEND SAVOLDI

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 12.—The National wrestling association today ordered the suspension of Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame football star who defeated Jim London at Chicago last Friday night.

Karl Malone, secretary of the association, said the suspension was in response to a request by Indiana athletic officials who charged that Savoldi had failed to fulfill a scheduled bout with Pat O'Shocker at Evansville, Ind., last Monday night.

DEVENS SCORES NO HIT, NO RUN GAME

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.—Charley (Hasty Pudding) Devens, who as Harvard's star pitcher used to stand Yale batters on their ears, had returned today to haunt the Elis.

Appearing here yesterday as a member of the world's champion New York Yankees, Devens held Yale to no hits and no runs in nine innings, the Yaks winning 6 to 0. He fanned 14 batters.

Devens became the first big league hurler to pitch a no-hit game this spring. His brilliant effort, coupled with his good work in the south, is expected to land him a regular job with the Yanks.

Sixty Pints Per Person Is Beer Quota to Raise $150,000,000 Tax

In terms of individual thirst, Treasury estimates that Uncle Sam's beer tax will bring $150,000,000 of new revenue to the government during the next year, presupposing an average annual consumption of sixty pints of beer per person.

By comparison, for instance, a package of cigarettes, whether it sells for ten cents or more, pays Uncle Sam six cents in tax—three times the tax that will be collected from a pint of beer. It will take six half-pint shells of lager to produce as much tax as is paid by one ten-cent package of smokes.

As against the estimate of $150,000,000 next year from beer, the government collected from cigarettes during 1932 a total of $310,573,823.28.

Internal revenue experts, however, predict that the official estimate of $150,000,000 from beer taxes will be exceeded by actual collections. This estimate, they point out, is based on a predicted consumption of 30,000,000 barrels.

They cite that prior to war-time prohibition, when the lid was first put on beer to conserve grain, we were consuming well above 50,000,000 barrels annually.

Collections from brewers for 1917, the last full year before prohibition, amounted to $87,875,672.76. On an equal consumption, the beer tax at the new rate would be $292,916,000. Which, however, would still be less than the $310,573,823 collected by Uncle Sam in 1932 from cigarettes.

BAD WEATHER 'IS BUGABOO'

Rain Feared In Most Cities As Big Leagues Open Today.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Bad weather will be general at the Major league baseball openings today. Rain is promised in most of the opening day cities.

Facts on the eight Major league openings are:

AMERICAN LEAGUE
Boston at New York, Andrews vs. Gomez, 40,000, rain;
Philadelphia at Washington, Earnshaw vs. Crowder, 25,000, rain;
Cleveland at Detroit, Brown vs. Bridges, 25,000, fair, cold;
Chicago at St. Louis, Durham vs. Hadley, 12,000, fair;
NATIONAL LEAGUE
Pittsburgh at Cincinnati, Swift vs. Johnson, 20,000, clear, cool;
St. Louis at Chicago, Dean vs. Warneke, 25,000, clear, cool;
Brooklyn at Philadelphia, Clark vs. Moore, 18,000, showers;
New York at Boston, Fitzsimmons vs. Betts, 15,000, showers.

COOL IN CINCINNATI

CINCINNATI, April 12.—The day dawned fair and cool today for the opening game here between the Cincinnati Reds and the Pittsburgh Pirates at Redland field.

The Pirates were the popular favorites to take the local team over the jumps, but Donie Bush, manager of the Reds, and different ideas.

"There's one thing I'm sure about," he asserted. "My boys will be in there fighting and we're going to fight them, not fondle them. I don't know whether we can win the opening game or not, but we will make every effort."

Because of his showing in the final exhibition games of the training period, St. Johnson has been selected by Bush to start the opener. Bill Swift, clever right hander, will start for the Pirates.

"My team is in fine shape and all ready to go," Manager Gibson of the Pirates said. "I understand that the Reds are considerably improved and may be hard to beat, but we will give them the best that we have in stock."

On the basis of present needs farmers could produce crops at a maximum rate from their breeding stock without danger of an oversupply for 10 years.

Some Illustrations Of Geographical Influences In The Making Of History

Following is another installment of the interesting topic so ably discussed by Prof. E. L. Daley before the Rotary club last Thursday. The final installment will appear Thursday.

There are in the whole world only 28 cities containing a million or more people and two of them are found in this region of the Northwest Territory. In the whole of the United States there are only 5 cities containing a million or more people and two of these 5 are in this territory.

Certainly we do not want to claim that the rapid development of this country, the like of which never before has been known in the history of the world, is due to the class of early settlers that came to this region. There is enough interesting material in the history of the development of this Northwest Territory, a great empire within an empire, to fill many volumes. I must be content on this occasion to take time only to allude to the rapid development of the city of Chicago, which passes anything of the kind in our time. From a struggling frontier town incorporated as a town in 1830 and as a city in 1837 with a population of 3,237 this city has grown in less than a century to a metropolis exceeding three million people, the third largest city in the world. There are today 36 states in the Union containing fewer people than does the city of Chicago. What has geography had to do with this phenomenal growth? Note its location at the southwest point of Lake Michigan. It has almost unlimited facilities for water transportation. In the early days of the history it made it the center of distribution to all the rapid growing centers of the great west. And it was the outlet for all of the surplus food products of the west which must pass through the Great Lakes and the Erie Canal and the Hudson River.

Then came the era of the building of railroads, and the location of Chicago caused all of the trunk lines of the great west to pass through that city. There was no other place where rail roads could be constructed with as little cost as they could in the country for many miles surrounding Chicago. Thus its location on Lake Erie and the nature of the surrounding country soon made it the world's greatest railroad center. These advantages of transportation together with the bountiful resources both mineral and agricultural have been the natural causes of the marvellous achievements of this wonderful city.

Some of you I am sure can remember when as many as 4 out of 5 persons and later half-breeders found in our wheat fields were made either in Springfield, Canton, Ohio, or in Massillon, Ohio. But it is not so today. The industry of manufacturing of farm implements has moved to the center of the market. The changes that have taken place with the development of the west make a long story and I hope you will recall as much of it as you can in order that you may see more clearly how geography is responsible for so many of our activities, our behavior if you please. But let us look just a little further at the growth of the city of Chicago, so rapidly developing, growing by leaps and bounds as has Chicago, creates great economical opportunities. These economical

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Karin' to Go

If you feel sour and weak and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul. You often break out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes three good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get to the source of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, acting when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for three pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name, Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Respect a physician, 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Eleven members of the You Go I Go sewing club and Miss Emma Kirkwood enjoyed a pleasant afternoon, Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Eva Dresbach, W. High-st.

The club was invited to the home of Mrs. E. O. Crites, N. Court-st., for a covered-dish luncheon, Tuesday, May 9.

ATTEND BRANCH MEET IN CHILLICOTHE

Seventeen members of the Women's Foreign Missionary society of the Local Methodist Episcopal church attended Tuesday the mid-winter branch meeting of the Cincinnati branch of the Women's Foreign Missionary Societies of the Methodist church held Monday and Tuesday at the Walnut-st. church in Chillicothe.
One-hundred and fifty delegates were present at the meeting representing 17 states in the Union. Mrs. J. M. Doby of Chillicothe, president of the branch, presided at the meeting.
An old-fashioned Methodist class meeting opened the Tuesday session and was followed by a beautiful, poignant, "Wells of Salvation" which depicted the work of the missionary societies. Miss Vera Fehr, who returned last week from India, where she is a missionary, gave an interesting talk.

The Ladies Aid society of the Chillicothe church served the luncheon at noon and during the afternoon session Mrs. C. R. Havighurst, of Columbus, spoke on the work done throughout the world by the missionaries in the field, and Mrs. E. E. Garver, of Columbus, spoke of the work at the home base.

A vocal solo by Paul Rockey, of Lancaster, and several quartet selections concluded the meeting.
Mrs. John Dunlap of Williamsport and Mrs. W. A. Vaughn, of Adelphi, president and corresponding secretary, respectively, of the Chillicothe district, were among the hostesses at the branch meeting.

Local persons attending the Tuesday session were Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Eichinger, Mrs. William Ulm, Mrs. Frank E. Barnhill, Miss Carrie Johnson, Mrs. S. G. Rader, Mrs. Hattie Denman, Mrs. Charles Gerhardt, Mrs. Lowell Brown, Misses Anna and Estella Grimes, Mrs. H. M. Crites, Mrs. Fred Nicholas, Mrs. Mack Noggle, Mrs. Fannie Kirkpatrick, Miss Elizabeth Renick, Mrs. George Marion and Mrs. Charles Stoffer.

Daughter of "Great Commoner" To Be First "Madame Minister"

Appointment of Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen as United States Minister to Denmark Shattered Another Diplomatic Tradition.

WITH PRINCE ERIK OF DENMARK
The appointment of Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, former Representative from Florida, and daughter of William Jennings Bryan, the "Great Commoner," as United States Minister to Denmark, is not only a triumph for Mrs. Owen, but also a tribute to womanhood in general. For hitherto the job of representing Uncle Sam in foreign countries had been monopolized by men. Mrs. Owen will need little or no coaching in her new duties. She was virtually born to statesmanship. In 1891, at the age of five, she was taken to the House of Representatives by her father, who was then winning his spurs as an ambitious Representative from Illinois. Baby Ruth confided at that time that one day she would return as a Congresswoman, a boast she made good. Mrs. Owen was educated at Monticello Seminary, near her birthplace at Jacksonville, Ill., and at the University of Nebraska. She married Major Reginald Owen, British Army officer, in 1910. Their wedding was the highlight of the season in Washington. On the outbreak of the World-War, Major Owen went off to fight for his country, and Mrs. Owen volunteered as a nurse. She served on British fronts in Egypt and Palestine. With the death of her husband from wounds after the Armistice, Mrs. Owen returned to Florida and devoted herself to her four children: Ruth, John, Reginald and Helen. In 1928 she was elected to Congress from the Fourth Florida District, but the wave of wet sentiment that swept the country last year lost her the fight for re-nomination. In Denmark, she will be on a fairly familiar ground. When she visited the country in 1930 she made a host of friends, one of whom is Prince Erik, of the Danish royal family. Her appointment to the important diplomatic post marks the second shattering of tradition in favor of women by the Roosevelt Administration, the other occasion being the appointment of Miss Francis Perkins as Secretary of Labor.
